

I am a listener of Airl Radio (92.9 FM Vancouver, WA) which is broadcast over FM translator service. I am concerned about proposed rule changes giving Low Power FM stations priority over FM translators, as this could force Airl off the air in my community. Airl is a unique station in my community; it is completely listener supported and it is the only station to play alternative Christian music. Because Airl is free from the conflict of interest that can happen with stations dependent upon commercial support, I rely on and trust Airl to examine issues that matter to my life and community. Airl's unique play-list gives my area access to a music scene that we would otherwise not have. Also, the moral stance and positive outlook of Airl is invaluable in helping myself and my friends get through the daily grind and all the storms of life. Airl has personally called me, not to ask for more money, but to thank me for my present support and to ask to pray for me. While Airl is not based in Vancouver, WA, it is a community in itself, and an integral part of my local community. Please allow Airl's family friendly programing to stay on the air.

Sincerely,

Sarah Provonche
